

CONTENTS OF VOLUME XXV.

NUMBER CXLV.

	Page
ART. I.—Contributions to Meteorology; by ELIAS LOOMIS. Eighteenth paper. With a map (Plate I),	1
II.—On Bowlder Drift in Delaware; by F. D. CHESTER,...	18
III.—Upon the Electrical Experiments to determine the location of the Bullet in the body of the late President Garfield: and upon a successful form of Induction Balance for the painless detection of Metallic Masses in the Human Body; by ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL,.....	22
IV.—A Method for determining the Rate of Tuning-forks; by A. A. MICHELSON,.....	61
V.—Relations of the Menevian Argillites and associated Rocks at Braintree and vicinity, in Massachusetts; by W. W. DODGE. With a map,	65
VI.—Observations of the Transit of Venus made at the Washburn Observatory, Madison, Wisconsin, 1882, De- cember 5-6; by E. S. HOLDEN,.....	71

SCIENTIFIC INTELLIGENCE.

- Chemistry and Physics.*—Improved Apparatus for Gas Analysis. GEPPERT, 74.—
Determination of Sulphur in Coal Gas, KNUBLAUCH, 75.—Direct Formation of Zinc Sulphide, SCHWARZ: Electromotive Force. BRAUN, 76.—Objections to Siemens' New Theory of the Sun, M. FAYE, G. A. HIRN: Comparative observations upon telluric and atmospheric lines of the spectrum. for the study of absorption of the atmosphere. CORNU, JANSSEN, 78.—The Electrical Congress, 79.
- Botany and Zoology.*—The supposed Lignified Snake from Brazil, 79.—Flora
Peoriana, Die Vegetation im Klima von Mittel Illinois, F. BRENDL, 81.—
Monograph of the Genus Lilium, H. J. ELWES, 82.—F. A. Ford on the Pelagic fauna of Freshwater Lakes, 83.—A new genus of spherical Rhizopods, H. B. BRADY, 84.
- Astronomy.*—Transit of Venus, 84.—Observations of the Transit of Venus at the Allegheny Observatory. S. P. LANGLEY, 85.—Elements of the great Comet of 1882, E. FRISBY, 86.
- Miscellaneous Scientific Intelligence.*—Science, a new American scientific Journal:
Report from the E. M. Museum of Geology and Archæology at Princeton. A.
GUYOT: Proceedings of the Davenport Academy of Natural Sciences, 87.—
Obituary.—FRANZ VON KOBELL, 88.