

- Astronomy*.—Abstract of a Report to the Solar Physics Committee, etc., B. STEWART, W. L. CARPENTER, 76.—Astronomical Observations at Dunsink, 78.—Zone Catalogue of the Argentine Observatory: International Conference at Washington, October, 1884, 79.
- Miscellaneous Scientific Intelligence*.—Systematic Earthquake Observations, 79.—Volcanic Phenomena of 1883, 80.—Annual Report of the Bureau of Ethnology, 81.—New England Meteorological Society, 82.—American Society for Psychological Research: American Pearls: Spaziergänge durch das Reich der Sterne, W. MEYER, 83.—Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society: Leisure Hours among the Gems, A. C. HAMLIN, 84. Obituary.—Hermann Kolbe, 84.

NUMBER CLXX.

	Page
BENJAMIN SILLIMAN	85
ART. XVI.—The Organization and Plan of the United States Geological Survey; by J. W. POWELL. With Plate I. . .	93
XVII.—Memorial of George Bentham; by ASA GRAY.	103
XVIII.—Paleontologic Notes; by C. D. WALCOTT	114
XIX.—Rotation of the Equipotential Lines of an Electric Current by Magnetic Action; by E. E. HALL.....	117
XX.—Use of the term Esker or Käm Drift; by J. H. KINAHAN	135
XXI.—Cause of Mild Polar Climates; by JAMES CROLL.	138
XXII.—Notice of the remarkable Marine Fauna occupying the outer banks off the Southern Coast of New England; by A. E. VERRILL	149
XXIII.—Note on a Fossil Coal Plant found at the Graphite deposit in Mica schist, at Worcester, Mass.; by J. A. PERRY	157
XXIV.—The Test Well in the Carboniferous Formation at Brownville, Neb.; by L. E. HICKS	159
XXV.—Review of Hill's Supplement to Delaunay; by J. N. STOCKWELL	160

SCIENTIFIC INTELLIGENCE.

- Chemistry and Physics*.—Relation between the Velocity of Evaporation of Liquids and their molecular weights, SCHALL, 163.—Quantitative determination of Metals by Electrolysis, CLASSEN, 164.—Specific gravity of monohydrated Sulphuric acid, MENDELEJEFF: Octosulphates, WEBER, 165.—Separation of Arsenic from Tin and Antimony, HUFSCHMIDT: Purification of Arseniferous Zinc, L'HÔTE: Perseite, a new sugar, MUNTZ and MARCANO: Synthesis of a Coloring matter resembling that of Litmus, TRAUB and HOCK, 166.—Use of the Induction Spark in Spectrum Analysis, DEMARÇAY: Effect of the Magnetic field upon Light, CORNU: A new Galvanometer, J. ROSENTHAL, 167.—Electrical resistance of microphone contacts during movement, BOEKMAN: Resistance of the Siemens Mercury Unit, WILD, 168.
- Geology and Natural History*.—Scorpion from the Upper Silurian, 168.—Dinoce-rata, a Monograph of an extinct order of gigantic Mammals, O. C. MARSH: Names of extinct reptiles, O. C. MARSH: Botanical Necrology for 1884, 169.
- Miscellaneous Scientific Intelligence*.—The late Henry Watts, F.R.S., F.C.S., 172.