

CONTENTS TO VOLUME XLI.

Number 241.

	Page
ART. I.—A Geologic Reconnaissance of the Cuzco Valley, Peru; by H. E. GREGORY (With Plates I and II)	1
II.—An Achromatoscope; by S. R. WILLIAMS	101
III.—The Life of Radium; by ELLEN GLEDITSCH	112
IV.—Some New Mineral Occurrences from the Tintic District, Utah; by A. H. MEANS	125
V.—The Present Status of the Investigation of the Origin of Barrier Coral Reefs; by T. W. VAUGHAN	131
VI.—Relations of Coral Reefs to Crust Movements in the Fiji Islands; by E. C. ANDREWS	135

SCIENTIFIC INTELLIGENCE.

Chemistry and Physics—Separation of Yttrium from the Yttrium Earths, J. B. BONARDI and C. JAMES: Volumetric Method for Potassium, G. AJON, 142.—Potash from Feldspar, 143.—Introduction to Chemical Analyses, E. W. ROCKWOOD: Laboratory Manual arranged to accompany "A Course in Chemistry," W. MCPHERSON and W. E. HENDERSON: Fluorescence and Resonance of Sodium Vapor, R. J. STRUTT, 144.— β -Rays from Radium D. L. MEITNER, 145.—Introduction to Magnetism and Electricity, E. W. E. KEMPSON: Introduction to the Mechanics of Fluids, E. H. BARTON, 149,

Geology and Natural History—Triassic Life of the Connecticut Valley, R. S. LULL, 147.—Central Connecticut in the Geologic Past, J. BARRELL: Bibliographic Index of American Ordovician and Silurian Fossils, R. S. BASSLER, 148.—Fifth Annual Report of the Director of the Bureau of Mines: Determinative Mineralogy, J. V. LEWIS, 149.—Monograph of the Existing Crinoids, A. H. CLARK: Practical Zoology, R. W. HEGNER: Course in Invertebrate Zoology, H. S. PRATT, 150.—Meaning of Evolution, S. C. SCHMUCKER: Lessons in Elementary Physiology, T. H. HUXLEY: Diversions of a Naturalist, R. LANKESTER: Beekeeping, E. F. PHILLIPS, 151.

Obituary—A. W. WRIGHT: O. A. DERBY: C. F. HOLDER: H. E. ROSCOE: H. C. BASTIAN: C. J. BOUCHARD: R. ASSHETON: A. RÜCKER: G. VASSEUR, 152.

NOTE.—The extra expense involved in the publication of the article on the Cuzco Valley by H. E. Gregory (pp. 1-100), particularly as to illustrations and maps, has been assumed by the National Geographic Society of Washington.—ED.